THE importance of the intelligence contained in the Bouter's telegram published in vesterday's issue is not easily estimated. It was hoped by many that the inauguration of e new reign in Turkey would bring about pacification of the insurgent provinces, or at least, would have the effect of confining the insurrection to its present limits. Austria has throughout exercised a tight rein upon Montenegro and sought to prevent Service from joining the rebels. But it seems either that national batted of the Turk, or Russian intrigue, has been too much for Austrian diplomacy, for both Montenegro and Servis. have entered the lists against the Ottoman rule. It may even turn out that the fall of ABDUL Aziz has hastened this movement, by compelling Russin to puch on matters for fear the contest, which she hopes no doubt will prove mortal to the Sick Man, should be brought to an amicable conclusion. Clearly that would not have been the Russian game The Slavonic and Greek population of Turkey Sire known to be under the influence of the Czan's Government, and will unbesitatingly dance to its piping. The prudence, moderation, and naturally pacific disposition of ALEXANDER IL have acted as Russia, but there are not wanting signs that the tide of warlike feeling is about to everloap the barrier of the Czan's caution.

In the absence of further information, it can only be supposed that the action taken by Servia and Montenegro is tacitly, if not avowedly, approved at St. Petersburg. The time may not yet be quite ripe for a formal declaration of her designs by Russia, for she seldom acts precipitately. Her plans may not be fully matured, and it will no doubt be politic to see first what chances the combatants and 100 per cent. No doubt she will be guided in some measure by circumstances, but she will take care to engs. The accession of Servia and Montenogro to the ranks of the insurgent host will materially assist in protracting the struggle, and will almost inevitably widen the area of conflict still further. Servia contains about one million people; and is virtually an independent State. Montenegro is a much smaller province, but its inhabitants are brave, warlike, and much opposed to Turkish rule. Should their example be followed by Roumania, the war will assume most serious proportions, and a posceful solution of the difficulty, without the partition of the Ottoman dominions in Europe, become well-nigh impossible. The real weakness of the Turks in Europe is not generally understood or ap- Dancan-II I have said anything wrong, I wretch, Asing, as wonder, and by fraud you prociated. A lecture upon "Ancient Mational Music. was given on the 18th May by Mr. Brinley Richards, in the concert room of the Royal Academy of Music, Lord Clarence Paget in the chair. The lecturer demonstrated that music was by no means a universal language. He then went into the question of how far harmony was known to the aggient Egyptian, Hebrew, Irish music was not pentatonic, as stated by Dr. Barpey, and that Welsh manio was diatonic. Some drawings (by Frederick Chaster, Esa), of Egyptian, Scotch, Irish, and Welsh instruments were exhibited, as were also some sketches (presented by Edward Gibbertson, Esq.), of the "Dichord," the most ancient stringed instrument with a neck; of a barp 3,000 years old. found in a tomb at Thebes; and of a Chipege "Cheng" (Jubal's organ). Miss Mary Davice and Miss Lizzie Evans assisted the lecturer by their vocal illustrations. Like "Arkwright's Wife," an earlier production of the same authors, "Abel Drake," the five-act drama of Messra, John Saunders and Tom Taylor, played for the first time at the Princess's Theatre, London, on the 20th May, deals with problems springing out of the collision in the manufacturing districts between intellect and capital. The piece was originally produced in the scenes in which its supposed action is laid. A certain fidelity to nature in. character and situation, which none but an inhabitant of Yorkshire or Lancashire can appreciate, stood then the author in good stead, and the play met with a success on the strength of the very things which to a southern audichae proved unmeaning or distasteful. The favourable verdict of North-country andiences has not been ratified by the more sophisticated playgoers of the capital. The development of the plot and dislike, and the conclusion elicited a storm of hisses and other manifestations of hostility. The London Figure tells the following story of a dispute between a director and artist at one of the Paris theatres. "It arose from Mr. Koning, the director, desiring Madame Feschard to play in the lever du rideau, or first (musical) force. The dispute was killed by a funny and natirioal article in one of the paper. It was pretended that a rich American, stricken by the personal charms of Madamo Peschard, and indigment at her treatment by the manager, bad bired the entire Theatre Remaissance for one night. He packed it with his friends, whom he engaged, firstly, to be in their places at seven o'clock precisely; secondly, to give Madame Peschard an ovation at each entry and exit, and after each of her complete; and thirdly, to quit the theatre offer the liver du rideau and without waiting for "La Petite Marice." The affair was supposed to come off: after the first piece the audience en masse left the threatre and left only four persons to witness "La Petite Marée," the director in a right-hand grand tier box, the author in a left-hand grand tier box. the composer in the middle of the balcony, and the rich American in the stale. The open was then solumnly played to an audience of four marineter.

Indeed, the 287 persons present got their money's worth, and not one of them, probably, would have missed it for twice the sum they paid. The Count, it appears, is oracked with the idea that he is a bornactor - a tragedian by the side of whom Clarrion, Macready, and the elder Booth are not worth mentioning. According to bim, it is a coruic part, as much so as Jens Bagge in "The Wandering Minstrel." The story of his personal appearance, prepeared by Mr. Winter. of the Tribune, is so vivid that we give it entire, He says that the Count represented Hamist as a "ricketty, lantern-jewed bid person, ornamented with a big, dyed mountable, gifted with the smile of a rejoicing tom pat, ferly as to gait, thin and acidulous as to vocal tones, as metallic alike in temperament and manifesiation as a japanned doal-souttle." THE OLD SCISSORS' SOLILOCUY. I am lying at rest in the sanctum to-night The place is deserted and still-To my n ht lie exchanges and manuscripts white, To my left are the ink and the quill-Yes, the quilt, for my mester's old-fashioned and quaint And refuses to write with a pen, He insists that old Franklin, the editor seint, Used o quill, and he'll imitate Ben-

I love the old fellow - together for years We have managed the "Farmer's Gazette." And although I am old, I'm his favourite chears, And can crowd the compositors yet. But my duties are rather too heavy, I think, And I of entimes envy the quill, As it hally leans with its nin in the ink, While I'm shooking array with e will.

But when I was now—I remember it well Though a score of long years have gone by-The heaviest share of the editing tell-On the quill, and I think with a sigh Of the days ween I'd selesor an extract or two From a neighbouring editor's leader. Then lough in my sleeve at the quill as it flow In behalf of the general reader.

I am being paid off for my merrimont then, For my master is wrinkled and grav. And seldom lays hold of his primitive pen-Except when he wishes to eay: We are needing some money to run this machine, And subscribers will please to remit: Or, "That lest load of wood that Jones brought us weapreen And so knotty if couldn't be split."

He is nervous and deaf and is getting quite blind (Though he hates to seknowledge the latter). And I'm sorry to say it's a puzzle to find Head or tail to the most of his matter. The compositors plague him whenever they see The result of a luckless endeavour. But the darling old rascal just lays it to me, And I make no remonstrance whatever.

Yes, I shoulder the hispas—very little I care. For the jolly compositor's jest, For I think of a head with the silvery hair That will soon, very soon be at rest. He has laboured full long for the true and the good Mid the manifold troubles that irk us-His only emclument, raiment and food. And-a puss, now and then, to the circus.

Heigho! from the past comes a memory bright

Who med me to olin from her tresses, one night a memorin lock for her lover. That dear little lock is still glossy and brown, And the youth-he's an editor here in the town-I'm employed on the staff of the latter.

Jam lying at rest in the sanctum to night-The place is descried and still-The stars are abroad and the mood is in sight Through the trees on the brow of the bill. Clouds harry along in undignified haste-"And the wind rushes by with a wail-Hello I there's a whopping big rat in the paste-How I'd like to sent down on his tail! -Parmenas Ria, in Scribner.

THE DUGA PASS The Duga Pass, the scene of the late severe en ragements in Herzegovina, bas often played a part in former wars, and here one of the greatest French generals laid the foundation of his fame. In 1789 the Austrian General Alvinezv's corps was beaten by the Turks, and retired through the Duga-Pass to join the main body of the army at Nevesinic. The brigade suffered dreadfully from the rayabs and begs, who hurled down stones from the beights as the troops passed through the defile. At one place, the socalled " Death's Head," where the pass scarcely thirty feet broad, the troops suffered so severely that the remains of the two regiments throw down their arms in despair. A young captain, however, with a few volunteers, climbed the "Death's Head," drove away the Turke, and thus saved a portion of the Austrian troops. In 1790 the same brigade marched to Luxembourg; the captain there challenged another officer, although duciling was strictly foroidden by the Emperor Joseph II. He was obliged to take flight, and entered the French service, where, as Kleber, he has won a lasting place in
